About Skyrocket Pediatric Therapy Foundation

Skyrocket Pediatric Therapy Foundation is a non-profit organization dedicated to serving children with special needs and their families in the Orange County and Inland Empire communities. We serve children with autism, down syndrome, cerebral palsy, learning disorders, developmental delay, unspecified language and motor impairments, and many more!

Founded by Rachel Troccoli, a speech and language pathologist, and Katie Oien, an occupational therapist, they saw first hand the amount of underserved children, overwhelmed families, and the high financial cost of their child's therapy. To help families navigate their child's development and therapy needs, and to ensure that children with developmental differences receive the services they deserve, Skyrocket was born.

Skyrocket provides community outreach to educate medical professionals, teachers, and families about typical development and red flags for communication, movement, learning, and behavior. Skyrocket provides case management for families who seek additional information and advocacy to obtain the services their child needs. Finally, Skyrocket offers financial assistance for those who would benefit from therapeutic services but have financial hardships. Financial hardship should NEVER be a reason that children do not receive the recommended services they deserve. Skyrocket exists to relieve these burdens from children with developmental differences and their families in our communities!
